CA PAY DATA REPORTING FAQ's UPDATED

In January 2022, the California Civil Rights Department (CRD) updated its pay data reporting FAQs for the 2022 reporting year, which are due May 10, 2023, to reflect the changes triggered by Senate Bill 1162. California law requires private employers of 100 or more employees (and/or 100 or more workers hired through labor contractors) to annually report pay, demographic, and other workforce data to the CRD.

Effective January 1, 2023, some of the SB 1162 changes to the state's pay data reporting are as follows:

Private employers with at least 100 employees must file a Payroll Employee Report regardless of whether the employer files a federal EEO-1 report. A prior limitation, that employers are only obligated to file a Payroll Employee Report if they must submit a federal EEO-1 report, was also removed.

Private employers with 100 or more employees hired through labor contractors within the prior calendar year must file a Labor Contractor Employee Report covering the employees hired through labor contractors in the prior calendar year. The employer must also disclose the ownership names of all labor contractors used to supply employees. Labor contractors are required to supply all necessary pay data to the employer.

Payroll Employee Reports and Labor Contractor Employee Reports must include the mean and median hourly rate of employee groupings (groupings of employees with the same establishment, job category, race/ethnicity, and sex).

The option for an employer to submit a federal EEO-1 report to CRD in satisfaction of its state pay data reporting requirement was eliminated.

The annual deadline for submitting pay data reports changed to the second Wednesday of each May.

The CRD was authorized to obtain penalties against employers that fail to file their pay data reports on time, as well as against labor contractors that fail to provide data to client employers who must submit Labor Contractor Employee reports.

New versions of pay data reporting resources for the new reporting year will also be available at www.calcivilrights.ca.gov/paydatareporting by February 1, 2023.
